As the rays of sun began to peek over the horizon, Shelly and Daisy lay curled up in their beds with the covers over their heads. It was getting warmer outside and the animals in the yard began to stir and move about doing their daily thing. Mittens, their pet cat was walking in circles around the room looking for a way to get outside until their brother Marcus opened the door and shouted, "It's time to get ready!"

The girls flew off their beds as though they had just been struck by lightning and started scampering and rushing around the room to get dressed. They stuffed all the things they would need for the trip into their backpacks and rushed downstairs with huge grins in their faces. Today was the day that they would be going the Paca Heights Waterfall with their family and they definitely did not want to be left behind.
