The 10-Day Challenge

As part of our new Personal Development section, we are inviting you to do a 10-day challenge. Simply choose something you want to do, and do it every day for ten days. But it must be a challenge, of course! To give you some ideas, we spoke to four people who have decided to try the challenge.

I've been doing a ten-day no-complaint challenge. So now I can't say anything bad when my brother doesn't wash the dishes. It's also difficult when I'm watching sports, and my team plays poorly. If I last ten days, it will be a great achievement, but I don't think I will.

Luz – Mexico

I've been trying not to eat sugar for ten days. I didn't realize that sugar was in everything! I failed on the second day when I had some bread that contained sugar. I've stopped putting sugar in coffee and have found one breakfast cereal that doesn't include sugar! I have more energy, and I can concentrate better at work, but I need some chocolate soon! Three days to go!

João – Brazil

I've posted a black-and-white photo on Facebook every day for ten days. My life is not very exciting, so it was a challenge to find interesting subjects. My most popular photo was of my cat in front of a lamp. It wasn't planned, but the light made my cat look really mysterious.

Diego – Colombia

I've been writing in a diary for seven days. I think it will be easy to complete the challenge, but some days it's more difficult than others. I usually write about how I feel, but yesterday I wrote a poem. It's nice that the challenge is flexible – you can do what you like. It's been fun so far. In the future I hope to work as a journalist.

Jose – Peru
