There's a fun traditional water festival every Thai New year that people want to go to! It's the unusual "Songkran Festival", also called the "Water Festival". It's the most expensive in Thailand, but it's known for the fantastic things people can do in it.

Songkran is in April, and it's open to everyone. For 3-5 days, people from rural areas who are working in the capital go back home with children for the festival; they spend time with their parents who they haven't seen for a long time. People throw water on their heads to have an excellent year, with money and without problems.

However, the festival has changed. Now people make teams to throw water at each other in a match and choose a winner. It's a wonderful reason to travel and enjoy the games. People sell, buy and use water toys, as well as carry cups of different sizes from their kitchens to throw water. Students don't wear their usual school clothes or get up early. During Songkran, it's very important to wear comfortable clothes and use something to protect your eyes from the sun and water.

Tourists from other countries say this is the most special festival they've ever been to because of its new idea of having fun. People of different ages participate; they act like kids, they shout and have a wonderful time.

It was the first time I traveled to South America, and I was surprised by the incredible landscape in the lost city in Colombia. My luggage was light because I would have to walk a lot. As soon as I reached Colombia, I was attracted by the mystery of the "Lost City" ruins, which are thought to be older than Peru's Machu Picchu.

After five days of adventure on the coast, which included recovering from an illness, I waved goodbye to some friends in Santa Marta as I set off on a four-day walk to the Lost City. I joined a group of strong explorers and their guide. Hernán, I was the only one who walked very slowly. However, that did not stop me moving with the group up the magic mountain range. Almost three days of walking for nine hours a day is part of this adventure; trust me, it's totally worth the sore legs!

We stopped to drive into cool pools and were impressed by blue butterflies, some of the biggest in the world, which accompanied us during the journey. At every camp, we ate fresh pineapple and oranges. The camps along the way appeared like illusions in the hot desert after a long day's walk. But the best of all was the three-course meal on the menu every night, thanks to the efforts of chefs who climbed on ahead to get it ready.

The people who were born there see themselves as guardians of the planet, and that's great! We cannot offer them anything of importance since they have everything they need. Both adults and children show their happiness by being polite with tourists; the children exchange a photo for chocolates.

31. What is the writer doing in this article?

- A. warning tourists of the dangers of illnesses in Santa Marta.
- B. showing how interesting an expedition to the Lost City can be.
- C. encouraging readers to visit her friends in Santa Marta.
- D. comparing the size of Machu Picchu with that of the lost city.

32. When describing the first part of her journey, the writer thinks that
- The tour guide was the strongest in the group.
 - Her coast weather cured her illnesses.
 - walking was the most valuable adventure for her.
 - moving slowly was the only way to cross the mountain.
33. In paragraph 3, the writer says that she
- really enjoyed the sunny, hot weather there.
 - was grateful to chefs who had dinner prepared on time.
 - was an expert on the natural world, especially on butterflies.
 - refused to eat oranges and pineapple while walking.
34. Which of the following could be a note for the tourists?
- Be prepared to be delighted by this magnificent place full of natural surprises.
 - This fantastic plan requires only curious, healthy, and brave explores.
 - Feel free to put all the personal things you may need into your backpack.
 - This is an incredible opportunity to taste a few typical snacks from this region.
35. Regarding the local people, the writer
- prefers children's behavior to adults' behavior.
 - feels amazed by the way they feel they protect the planet.
 - considers she deserves a photo of herself with everyone.
 - thinks that children are the ones who should protect the environment.
