- e. The first step is to find out what you know about the problem.

Part 3: Read the texts and then decide which person expresses each of the opinions below.

Write A, B, C or D.

- 8. Who prefers to stay at home?
- 9. Who thinks a holiday requires good weather?
- 10. Who likes seeing tourist attractions?
- 11. Who wants to go mountaineering trip?
- 12. Who has never been abroad?
- 13. Who likes going walking?
- 14. Who think going to the beach is boring?

A: Last year, I went on a mountain climbing trip with my friends. It was the most horrible trip I have ever experienced. However, after that trip, I had a strong passion for walking. So now, every day I walk as a hobby, and it also helps my health a lot. I'm old so I'm no longer interested in traveling to far away places. Instead, I want to lie on a comfortable sofa and watch my favorite TV show.

B: When I travel somewhere, I often ask for bus routes to famous tourist destinations so that I can get to those places as quickly as possible and avoid wasting time going around. Famous tourist destinations are the places I want to explore the most when traveling somewhere. I don't understand why many people just like to sit still at the beach when traveling, I find that uninteresting and time-consuming.

C: My family and I often plan to travel every time we have a vacation. If the weather is nice then our plans go ahead as usual, if not, we will postpone that vacation. For my family, light wind and warm sunlight are important when we go out. A few of my friends invited me to go climbing, but I'm afraid of heights so I refused them. However, in the future I really want to try mountain climbing once.

D: Next month's trip will be the first time I travel to another country. Normally I only travel to famous local places or in my country. These places are beautiful but I'm so excited to travel to a foreign place once in my life.

Part 4: Read the text and then match the paragraph with its correct heading.

- 15. First step on the ice
- 16. Less effort needed
- 17. Why is it so cold?

18. Where is the end of the Earth?
19. Who is in charge?
20. Race to the pole
21. Hidden geography

A. Despite being covered in thick sheets of ice, Antarctica has a surprisingly diverse and dramatic landscape hidden beneath its surface. Using ground-penetrating radar and satellite imaging, scientists have discovered vast mountain ranges, deep valleys, and even ancient lakes buried under kilometers of ice. These findings suggest that Antarctica was once a very different environment. Studying this hidden geography helps researchers understand the Earth's geological past, as well as how changes in climate may affect the region's ice coverage in the future.

B. Antarctica has often been described as the end of the Earth. Located at the southernmost point of the planet, it remains one of the most mysterious and least accessible places for humans. It's surrounded by the Southern Ocean and sits opposite the Arctic in the global geography. For centuries, explorers speculated whether such a place existed at all. Today, while satellite images and scientific missions provide more data, the continent still retains an aura of the unknown, attracting adventurers and scientists who want to experience the planet's final frontier.

C. Although Antarctica is not claimed as a country, several nations have laid territorial claims over parts of the continent. However, under the Antarctic Treaty System signed in 1959, no single country has full ownership. Instead, the region is governed collectively by over 50 countries that have agreed to preserve it for peaceful and scientific purposes. No military activity is allowed, and scientific cooperation is encouraged. This unique model of international governance helps protect the fragile environment of the frozen land and ensures that its resources are not exploited for commercial gain.

D. The early 20th century saw a dramatic competition between nations to reach the South Pole. Most famously, British explorer Robert Falcon Scott and Norwegian Roald Amundsen led rival expeditions. Amundsen reached the Pole first in 1911, using dog sleds and careful planning. Scott arrived weeks later, only to perish on the return journey with his team. The race to the pole was one of the most extreme tests of human endurance and remains one of the most iconic chapters in the history of polar exploration.

E. Antarctica is the coldest place on Earth, with temperatures regularly dropping below -60°C in winter. The continent's high altitude, its position near the South Pole, and the fact that sunlight is absent for months all contribute to its extreme chill. Its white ice surface also reflects most of the sun's heat back into the atmosphere. These unique features make it difficult for heat to accumulate, and as a result, the region remains frozen even in summer.

Understanding these conditions helps scientists study global weather patterns and climate change.

F. The first known landing on Antarctica took place in the early 19th century when a group of seal hunters unintentionally arrived at the icy coastline. Later, exploratory missions were organized specifically to set foot on the continent. In 1895, a Norwegian expedition became the first officially recognized landing. These early steps were dangerous and uncertain, with little knowledge of the terrain or weather. Still, the achievement marked a turning point in human exploration, showing that even the most remote and inhospitable places on Earth could be reached with courage and persistence.

G. Travel across Antarctica remains one of the most difficult journeys on Earth. However, modern technology has significantly reduced the physical effort required. In the past, explorers dragged heavy sleds by hand or used animals, often in dangerous and freezing conditions. Today, snowmobiles, tracked vehicles, and even aircraft allow researchers to move equipment and people more easily. While the environment is still harsh, advances in transportation and survival gear make scientific missions more efficient and less life-threatening than those of early explorers.
