Vietnamese Teenagers' Lifestyle Then and Now

Viet Nam is going through industrialisation and modernisation, and many aspects of lifestyle have changed. The most noticeable differences can be seen in teenagers. Today, they are more flexible and casual in the way they dress, wearing modern clothes and even dyeing their hair in different colours. They are also more confident in communicating with others, including their elders. Many teenagers are ambitious, daring in their actions, and technology has become an important part of their daily lives. They use it not only for study but also for entertainment.

However, Vietnamese teenagers still know how to treasure traditional values. Customs and traditions are passed down from one generation to the next. Teens continue to show respect for their elders both at home and in society. They value their families, often turning to their parents for advice and permission in important decisions such as higher education or marriage. On special occasions, they still wear traditional costumes like ao dai or ao tu than and enjoy cooking Vietnamese dishes.

This combination of modern lifestyle and traditional values shows how Vietnamese teenagers are adapting to change while keeping their cultural identity.

Changes in Food Habits: Past and Present

There are clear differences in food habits between past and present lifestyles. In the past, people grew their own food such as fruits, vegetables, and cereals. They also raised fish in ponds and livestock on farms. Their meals always included fresh food with plenty of vegetables and fruits. Because they worked hard in the fields, they did enough daily exercise to keep their bodies strong. As a result, they suffered from fewer diseases, especially those related to the digestive system.

Today, technology has transformed agriculture into mass production, using pesticides and chemicals to increase crop yields. Food is often kept in fridges for days or weeks before being eaten, and ready-made food at markets is preserved with additives. Modern diets include more spicy fried dishes and fast food. Many people find fast food convenient and tasty, but it leads to serious health problems such as obesity, diabetes, and heart disease.

Compared with the past, people now are less healthy because of their eating habits. While traditional diets kept people fit and active, modern lifestyles rely more on processed food, which brings both convenience and risks.

(Adapted from Global workbook 9)

(TH) Question 25: What is the passage mainly about?

- A. The history of Vietnamese farming
- B. The differences in food habits in the past and today
- C. The importance of cooking skills
- D. The benefits of eating fast food

(NB) Question 26: What kind of food did people in the past usually eat?

- A. Ready-made food with preservatives

- B. Spicy fried food from markets
- C. Fresh food with vegetables and fruits
- D. Canned food kept for weeks

(NB) Question 27: Why were people in the past healthier?

- A. They ate more fast food
- B. They did enough daily exercise
- C. They used more chemicals in farming
- D. They spent less time in the fields

(NB) Question 28: What do many people find convenient today?

- A. Growing cereals on their farms
- B. Preparing traditional fresh meals
- C. Cooking food with bamboo stoves
- D. Buying and eating fast food

(TH) Question 29: What can be inferred from the passage?

- A. Modern lifestyles bring both advantages and health risks
- B. Traditional diets caused many diseases in the past
- C. People today exercise more than before
- D. Preservatives make modern food healthier

Life in Vietnam in the Past

In the past, life in Vietnam was deeply connected to the land and traditional customs. Most people lived in rural areas, where farming was not only an occupation but also a way of life. Families often lived in extended households with three or more generations under one roof, including grandparents, parents, and children. Their houses were simple, made from natural materials such as wood, bamboo, and palm leaves, (30) _____.

Daily life mainly revolved around farming. Families worked together to grow rice, vegetables, and raise animals. Everyone had specific duties, and children were taught to help their family from an early age. (31) _____, children were expected to listen to and follow the advice of their grandparents and parents.

Entertainment in those days was simple and community-oriented. Without modern technology, people spent their free time talking, (32) _____, and taking part in festivals.

These events were not only enjoyable but also helped strengthen the bonds within the community. They allowed people to celebrate their shared culture and traditions, making life meaningful and socially connected (33) _____.

Subject: Changes in my family

Hello Anna,

It's nice to hear from you again. Let me tell you about some changes in my family over the last three years. We are still a nuclear family with two generations, but our living conditions are much better now. Last year, my mother started a new business, so she spends less time at home but earns more money. We also moved to a bigger house with more rooms and a small garden. At weekends, we often go shopping or eat out together. My parents also give me more independence and respect my privacy, which makes me feel more grown-up.

That's all for now. Write back soon and tell me about your family.

All the best,

Mai
