One thing I have never understood is the desire to live in the country. People _____ life in the city with crime and noise and they have the impression that life in the country must be safer and quieter. On the _____, country life has just as many hazards (опасности) as the big city. I have a friend who lives next to a farm and he _____ that it's noisier living there than it ever was in London. The birds and animals start _____ a noise first thing in the morning, quickly followed by the farm machinery. And as for crime, my friend's car has been _____ four times in four years. People who think the country is the safest place to be can't be right!

The other myth is that the countryside is a friendly place. Whenever I _____ time in the country, I'm surprised by how busy people are. They never seem to speak to each other for more than a minute or two. On my _____ back from work, I often _____ across three or four neighbours and we have a long chat. It's that connection with other people that I would _____ most if I lived in the country.
