Katy, Betty and Richard had read about the refugees in Europe, and they wanted to help. They learned that a lot of refugee children don't have access to education. And the children's families probably don't have enough money to buy books. So the three friends decided to organize a book collection.

"I'm sure we'll be able to collect a lot of books," said Betty. She had lots of books at home that she didn't read anymore. "If everyone brings one book, we might collect enough to fill five boxes," she said.

Richard wrote an advertisement for the school website. Katy and Betty made some posters and put them up around the school.

On Saturday, the three friends met at Betty's house early in the morning and started to get ready. A few moments later, they heard the doorbell ring. "I hope that's someone for the book collection," said Katy.

When she opened the door, she saw a long line of children outside the house. Everyone was carrying a lot of books.

"I think we're going to have enough books to send," said Richard.

"We'll definitely need some more boxes!" said Betty.
