The empty house

I often see empty houses dotted around villages in the country and

(0) OCCASIONALLY like to find out more about them. This house was no different, so I walked up (1) _____ to the front door to see what I could find. Since the windows were boarded up, I assumed nobody lived there, but I still knocked on the door

(2) _____. Instead of anyone answering, the door opened, so I

(3) _____ went inside. It was cold and dark, but I could see just about enough to make out the different rooms on the ground floor. I could see that what was

(4) _____ a living room had been turned into a bedroom because of the decoration. My heart beat (5) _____ faster as I noticed a scrap of paper on the floor. I picked it up; it seemed it was a (6) _____ timetable for children's activities. Stuck to the paper was an old piece of chocolate; it appeared that the owner had been eating (7) _____ even though they were supposed to be exercising. Deciding that the paper was a (8) _____ insignificant find, I dropped it and continued looking around.

Mysterious discoveries

I love reading about mysteries, and the older, the (0) B the story seems to be. It helps that I'm interested (1) ____ archaeology too, as the discoveries I like tend to be ancient. A lot of people know about the existence of Stonehenge in England, but experts are still (2) ____ of the function of the site. They can make guesses based on some of the items found at the site, but I'd love to know the kind of (3) ____ and ceremonies that took place there. Archaeologists are still investigating, and as recently as 2015, they thought they had found (4) ____ of a similar structure, just two miles from Stonehenge. The new structure would be much larger than Stonehenge and would (5) ____ to a complete rethink of history. However, when they excavated the site, they did not find any stone constructions. (6) ____, they found a number of large holes into which wooden posts had been placed and then removed. The posts must have been extremely high and experts still have no (7) ____ how or why they were taken out. Although archaeologists didn't find what they were expecting, there is now a new mystery which needs to be (8) ____ and I will be eagerly waiting to see what it is.
