

Eggs

There are three things inside a bird's egg: a baby bird, a yellow yolk and a clear jelly ...called... the white. The yolk is food eaten by growing birds. The white is food, too,

(1) it also protects the bird if the egg gets a knock. Birds turn (2) eggs so that every part of the egg gets its fair share of warmth. Baby birds need warmth to grow, that's (3) a parent has to sit on the nest. Fish, frogs, snakes, turtles, insects and spiders are all types of animals that lay eggs. The eggs look and feel quite different. Turtle eggs are soft and about the size

(4) golf balls. Butterfly eggs are tiny and (5) sparkle like shiny jewels.
