

Zoe is window shopping with her friends. It has been 3 hours since she got into this shop but she has not been able to make any decisions about what dresses she should buy. Now she is looking at some jumpers and tights because they are discounted. A few minutes later, her friends show her some adorable gloves and they are now talking about its styles without knowing that it's getting darker and darker outside.

1. Zoe has not chosen what dress to buy.
2. She is looking at some jumpers and tights because she can get a gift.
3. The gloves her friends show her look lovely.

Unlike Zoe, Lily often shops online because there are a host of sale campaigns. Last month, she claimed that she had saved nearly $500 dollars by hunting for a bargain. Now she is looking for some discounted trousers on Amazons without knowing that is just false discounting. Zoe and Lily loves shopping but their clothes. Normally their favorite items are abandoned after a few wears because they are not on trend any more.

1. Zoe thought she had saved $500 by hunting for items that had decreased price.
2. Zoe and Lily loves shopping as much as their clothes.
3. They throw their clothes away after wearing them a few times because they are not fashionable any more.

'Fashion is being costly than ever before' says Dr. Jake Hartwell from the Faculty of Environment at the University of Glastonbury, UK. 'It is not only a waste of time and money but it is also a hazard to our environment'

1. Fashion is dangerous to the environment.

'Fashion is poisoning our planet slowly,' he says. Nowadays, more clothes are produced than ever before, unfortunately, only to be left in landfills even when they are still new. This is catastrophic for the environment. Clothes are usually left untreated in the landfills, where the dyes on them dissolve in runoffs which then flow into rivers and streams, contaminating them with noxious chemicals. People who rely on these water sources, as a result, are subject to a lot of health problems.

1. In the past, people made less clothes than now.
2. Clothes in the landfills are so old that they cannot be used any more.
3. The liquid that makes clothes colorful cannot be mixed with water.
4. The chemicals pollute streams and rivers and make people have health problems.
