Read the text below and answer the questions.

The Amazing Bactrian Camel

Bactrian camels are found in the Gobi desert of China and Mongolia. They are related to the common Arabian camels. However, unlike the Arabian camels, they have two humps on their backs.

Bactrian camels are like living water tanks. They store fat in their humps, not water. This fat gives them energy to travel long distances without needing to eat much. They can even go for days without any drink. Other than that, their wide feet help them walk on hot sand without sinking in.

Bactrian camels are also very strong. They can carry heavy loads on their backs, which makes them helpful for people who live in deserts. They can even be used as transportation. Today, there are only 1000 Bactrian camels left in the world.

I0. What kind of places do Bactrian camels live in?

A. cold and snowy places B. hot and sandy places C. wet and grassy places
