

The Easter Bilby

If you lived in Australia you'd know exactly what a bilby is. The bilby is a marsupial[1] found in Australia.

The bilby's fur is very soft, usually grey in colour. The belly is white and the tail is long.

Bilbies have very large ears like a rabbit's. The ears help them listen for . Their strong front paws help them dig and find food. Bilbies can't see too well, so it is lucky that their hearing and smelling are good.

The bilby is a nocturnal animal. They come out of their burrows dark and look for food. They eat seeds, insects, fruit, and even small animals. the koala, the bilby doesn't drink water. It gets all the water it needs its food.

Bilbies are dying out and are now endangered and in of protection. To make everyone notice these animals, people in Australia have tried to replace the Easter bunny with the Easter bilby.

Chocolate bilbies are very popular!
