Task 3: Write 20 emotional adjectivesFree Time Activities Around the World

How people spend their free time says a lot about their culture, values, and even the weather in their country. Around the world, people find many different ways to relax, have fun, and stay connected with others.

In Sweden, where winters are long and cold, people like activities that make them feel comfortable and calm.

Many enjoy spending evenings at home, reading, cooking, or doing crafts. A popular tradition called fika means taking a break to drink coffee and chat with friends or colleagues — it's not just about coffee, but about friendship and slowing down.

In contrast, Brazil is known for its energy and love of life. In their free time, Brazilians often take part in music and dance events. Samba and football are two national passions. During weekends, beaches become crowded with people playing, singing, or just relaxing in the sun. For Brazilians, free time is a celebration of life.

In Canada, free time often depends on the season.

During winter, people enjoy skiing, skating, or watching ice hockey. When summer comes, they go camping, fishing, or hiking in the mountains. Canadians believe that spending time in nature helps them stay healthy and balanced.

Although the ways people spend their free time are different, one thing is the same everywhere: people want to feel happy, relaxed, and connected — whether that means enjoying a quiet moment or dancing in the streets.
