

Passive

The object in the active sentence corresponds to the subject in the passive sentence:

All schools teach OBJECT
maths.
SUBJECT
Maths is taught in all schools.

We make the passive form with auxiliary verb be + past participle. The form of be changes person (1st, 2nd, 3rd) and tense. The past participle always stays the same:

Present simple: All letters are typed.

Past simple: The school was built in 1978.

Rewrite the phrases in italics in the passive.

The other day, someone stopped me in the street.

They wanted to ask me some questions about a festival that they hold in our town every year.

They asked me if I thought the festival was a good idea. They told me that they wanted to make some changes to it this year and asked me how I thought they could organise it better. I said that they provide lots of things for adults and young kids, but not much for teenagers. I said I thought it would be good if they brought more rock bands to the festival.

I also said they should allow young bands to play

there. I said that because I'd love to play the festival with my band. I hope they ask us!
