1. Read and find the words in bold in the text that match with the definitions:

Transport Systems Around the World

The buses in Curitiba, a city in southern Brazil, carry half a million passengers a day- that's 30% of the city's population. You buy your ticket before you get on the bus: the fare is the same wherever you're going. No one in the city lives more than 400 metres from a bus stop. Buses are very frequent and the tube-shaped bus shelters are raised to make it easy to get on and off the bus. People don't need to use their cars in the city, so there's less pollution and less congestion on the roads.

The first metro station in Moscow were built in the 1930s and 1940s as " palaces for the people". The architecture was grand and the decoration was elaborate. Komsomolskaya station, for example, has marble columns, mosaics and chandeliers, which you can still see today. The metro carries 7 million passengers a day on weekdays and is known for being frequent and reliable. People say that if you travel by metro in Moscow, you have no excuse for being late.

Japanese bullet trains travel at up to 320 kilometres an hour. The 515- kilometre journey between Tokyo and Osaka, the world's busiest high-speed line, takes around three hours; by car it would take over six. Bullet trains are used by commuters because they're fast, reliable and punctual. They're popular with foreign tourists too, because, as a tourist, you can buy a rail pass that gives you unlimited travel during your trip across Japan.
