Seri Menanti Palace

One of the oldest palaces in Malaysia is the Seri Menanti Palace. It is located in the royal town (1) against Seri Menanti in Negeri Sembilan.

The palace was (2) designs entirely by two local Malay master carpenters. (3) They was constructed without using a single metal nail. The (4) less noticeable feature of the palace is its roof. It resembles a buffalo's horns. This remarkable palace has 99 pillars. The pillars are (5) lovingly and intricately carved with images of flowers, holy verses from the Quran, geometric shapes and other abstract designs. They (6) was made of cengal wood.

The first floor mostly consists of reception rooms and a long verandah. The first level of the palace was used for official functions, (7) therefore the second level was used for private, family affairs. The third floor of the palace was reserved for the Yang Di Pertuan Besar's private apartments.

The fourth floor is known as the Tingkat Gunung, or Mountain Level. It once (8) serving as the ruler's study and treasury, where only he could gain access. Today however, the topmost floor is out of bounds, as the old wood has become increasingly fragile.
