PART 1: READING COMPREHENSION

TEXT 1 (For.no.1 to 8)

Many years ago, in a tranquil village beside a wide river, people lived in close connection with their natural surroundings. The forest around them was thick and flourishing, and the river supplied them with clean water and abundant fish. For generations, the villagers practiced sustainable living, taking only what was necessary and safeguarding the forest.

Eventually, a new leader persuaded the villagers that large-scale logging would bring them prosperity. At first, they were reluctant, but ambition soon replaced caution. They exploited the forest for timber, constructed impressive houses, and dismissed the warnings of the elders. As a result, the river became contaminated, the soil weakened, and wildlife gradually disappeared. Still, the villagers did not stop.

One severe rainy season, catastrophe unfolded. Without trees to anchor the soil, devastating floods and landslides swept through the settlement. Homes collapsed, families suffered, and the community was left in despair. Only then did they recognize the irreversible damage of their actions: by exploiting nature, they had destroyed their own security.

Determined to recover, the villagers rebuilt their homes and committed themselves to reforestation. Through restoration and respect for the environment, they learned that resilience and safety depend on living in balance with nature.

Since that day, the villagers rebuilt their homes and replanted the forest. They learned that living in balance with nature was the only way to keep their village safe.

1. What natural resources did the villagers get from the river?

TEXT 2 (For.no.9 to 16)

In the beautiful province of Lampung, Indonesia, there is a legendary well known as Sumur Putri. This well is not just any ordinary well; it is said to have a mystical story behind it. The legend tells the story of a princess who lived in a kingdom long ago.

The princess was known for her kindness and beauty. She was loved by all the people in the kingdom. However, there was a powerful and evil sorcerer who wanted to take over the kingdom. He cast a spell on the kingdom, causing it to be plagued by drought and famine.

The princess, determined to save her kingdom, went on a journey to find a solution. She prayed to the gods and asked for their help. The gods, moved by her kindness and determination, gave her a magical staff. With this staff, she was able to create a well that would provide water for the kingdom and bring prosperity back to the people.

The princess was overjoyed and quickly used the staff to create the well. As she struck the ground with the staff, water began to flow, and the kingdom was saved. From that day on, the well was known as Sumur Putri, which means "The Princess's Well" in Indonesian.

The people of the kingdom were grateful to the princess and celebrated her bravery and kindness. They believed that the well had magical powers and would bring good fortune to those who drank from it. People would often visit the well and drink from its waters, hoping to receive blessings.

TEXT 3 (For.no.17 to 25)

In today's modern era, financial literacy has become one of the most essential life skills. Unfortunately, many Indonesian students still lack sufficient knowledge and skills to manage money wisely. This lack of financial literacy has serious consequences, leading to poor financial decisions, rising debt, and even vulnerability to illegal practices.

Firstly, the absence of strong financial literacy education leaves many students unprepared to face the rise of illegal online digital loans. Many young people, desperate for quick cash, fall victim to these predatory schemes without fully understanding the risks of high interest rates and abusive collection methods. In addition, the growth of illegal online gambling platforms has trapped many students, draining their finances and disrupting their academic and social lives. These problems are clear evidence that the younger generation urgently needs applicable financial education.

Secondly, financial literacy is not only about avoiding debt or gambling, but also about empowering youth to build responsible financial habits. Skills such as budgeting, saving, and investment prepare students to become independent and productive citizens. A financially literate generation is also more likely to support Indonesia's economic growth through entrepreneurship and wise financial choices.

Therefore, financial literacy must be integrated into the national curriculum in practical ways. Schools should teach not only theory, but also real-life applications such as managing digital payments, avoiding illegal loans, and recognizing gambling risks. In conclusion, improving financial literacy is a crucial step to protect Indonesia's youth and strengthen the nation's economic future.

17. Which sentence best summarizes the text?
 - A. Indonesian students have mastered financial literacy in schools.
 - B. Many Indonesian students fall into debt and gambling due to strong financial education.
 - C. Lack of financial literacy causes debt and gambling problems; therefore, schools must provide practical financial education.
 - D. Schools should ignore financial literacy because it is irrelevant.
 - E. Financial literacy only helps students with digital banking.
18. What is the main purpose of the text?
 - A. To entertain readers with gambling stories
 - B. To persuade readers about the importance of financial literacy
 - C. To explain how online shopping works
 - D. To describe financial literacy activities
 - E. To discuss financial literacy among Indonesian students
19. What likely comes before the first paragraph of the text?
 - A. A story about a successful farmer
 - B. A prediction about future technology
 - C. A conclusion about digital banking
 - D. A solution for online gambling
 - E. Background information about Indonesia's low financial literacy rate
20. How are illegal online loans and online gambling similar according to the text?
 - A. Both provide safe ways to earn money
 - B. Both are supported by schools
 - C. Both trap young people and create financial problems
 - D. Both help students to save money
 - E. Both are legal financial practices
21. Why are Indonesian students vulnerable to online debt and gambling?
 - A. Because financial literacy education is weak
 - B. Because they already have strong financial knowledge
 - C. Because schools ban digital technology
 - D. Because students refuse to use money
 - E. Because online platforms are available
22. What is the likely outcome if financial literacy is taught effectively?
 - A. Students will fall into more debt
 - B. Students will ignore money issues
 - C. Students will become financially responsible
 - D. Schools will stop teaching about finance
 - E. Students will depend more on online loans
23. Which of the following is an opinion expressed in the text?
 - A. Many students fall victim to illegal online loans

- B. Financial literacy must be integrated into the national curriculum
 - C. Illegal gambling platforms exist
 - D. Students face abusive collection methods
 - E. Rising debt is common among students
24. How could the text be made more valid and reliable?
- A. By adding only personal stories
 - B. By giving more details
 - C. By showing less evidence
 - D. By ignoring evidence of online loans
 - E. By including official statistics on youth debt
25. This lack of financial literacy has serious consequences, leading to poor financial decisions, rising debt, and even vulnerability to illegal practices.(Paragraph 1)
The word "consequences" can be best replaced by....
- A. benefits
 - B. outcomes
 - C. advantages
 - D. rewards

TEXT 5 (For.no.35 to 40)

A cloudburst is an extreme weather event characterized by sudden and intense rainfall, often accompanied by strong winds and thunderstorms. This phenomenon occurs when a large amount of atmospheric water vapor condenses and falls rapidly, resulting in heavy rainfall.

The characteristics of cloudbursts include sudden and intense rainfall, often exceeding 100 mm per hour, and typically lasting for a short duration of a few minutes to hours. These events are often localized, affecting small areas and catching communities off guard.

Cloudbursts are caused by atmospheric instability, where warm air rises rapidly and cool air sinks, and require significant moisture accumulation from sources like oceans or lakes. The combination of these factors can lead to severe impacts, including flash flooding that devastates communities and infrastructure, and landslides or mudslides that threaten human life and property.

The impacts of cloudbursts can be mitigated with effective early warning systems, emergency preparedness plans, and resilient infrastructure. By understanding the causes and characteristics of cloudbursts, communities can better prepare for and respond to these events.

In addition to infrastructure and planning, public awareness and education are also crucial in reducing the risks associated with cloudbursts. By knowing what to do in case of a cloudburst, individuals can take necessary precautions to ensure their safety and the safety of those around them.

35. What is the writer's motive in writing this text?
- A. To narrate the experience of surviving a cloudburst
 - B. To entertain readers with a story about heavy rain

 - C. Seasonal droughts
 - D. Human industrial activities
 - E. Forest fires
37. Which is the correct outline of the text?
- A. Impacts → Causes → Characteristics → Mitigation
 - B. Definition → Characteristics → Causes → Impacts → Solutions
 - C. Causes → Definition → Impacts → Awareness
 - D. Awareness → Definition → Planning → Impacts
 - E. Planning → Mitigation → Characteristics → Causes
38. Which supporting detail explains why cloudbursts are dangerous?
- A. They last for months.
 - B. They are always predictable.
 - C. They cause flash floods, landslides, and infrastructure damage.
 - D. They only happen in deserts.
 - E. They are caused by forest fires.
39. The preceeding paragraph before the text likely talks about.....
- A. Examples of natural disasters in general
 - B. The history of global warming
 - C. The process of photosynthesis
 - D. The importance of agriculture
 - E. Types of deserts in the world.
