I booked a room in a farmhouse near a small village in the south of Italy. My travel plan said my plane would arrive at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. From the airport, it was only a 30-minute drive. I wanted to arrive before dark, relax with a drink, watch the sunset, and have a nice dinner.

But the problems started at Heathrow airport. My plane was three hours late! I walked around, looked in the shops, and drank coffee. I didn't eat anything. That was a big mistake! On the plane, the food was cold and horrible, so I couldn't eat it.

When we finally landed in Italy, the sun was already going down. I missed the sunset! At the car hire desk, there was another problem: my name wasn't in the computer, and there were no cars left. There were no buses or trains to the village, and the taxis were on strike.

The receptionist felt sorry for me. She called her brother, Alessandro, who came in an old car to drive me. But after 15 minutes, the car broke down! I was tired, sad, and very hungry. Luckily, Alessandro was a mechanic. After one hour, he fixed the car and we drove again.

At last, just before midnight, we arrived at the farmhouse. A man opened the door and smiled. "Come in, we waited for you," he said. Inside, I met some of the friendliest people ever, and together we ate a delicious meal.
