READING

Read the text carefully.

Emma has always dreamed of traveling the world, but her current life makes it difficult. She works long hours in a small bakery, and most of her income goes toward rent, bills, and basic expenses. Even though she enjoys her job, she often feels stuck in routine. To escape from reality, she watches travel documentaries every evening. If she had enough money, she would take a year off to visit different countries.

Her dream is to start in Japan because she wants to see the cherry blossoms and try real Japanese food. If she didn't have to work every weekend, she would take short trips to nearby towns just to relax. Emma knows these dreams might not come true soon, but imagining them gives her motivation. She believes that if people had more opportunities, they would live happier lives.

Sometimes she asks herself: "What would I do if I lived in another country?" She thinks she would choose a quiet place near the ocean, where she could bake pastries and meet new people. For now, she continues working, saving little by little, and hoping that one day her dreams will turn into real plans.
