Aquilino Flores was born in poverty, high up in the Andes mountains. He was 12 when he left home and traveled to Lima, the capital of Peru, to work, and his first job there was washing cars. He earned just enough money to live and nothing more, but Aquilino was a good worker and a friendly guy, and one day one of his customers suggested that he sell T-shirts. The man gave Aquilino 20 T-shirts and he sold them in one day. That is how Aquilino Flores started in the fashion industry.

Now his company, Topitop, is the largest clothes producer in Peru and makes over US$275 million a year. The company has stores all over Peru, as well as Venezuela, and also exports clothes to Brazil, Europe and the USA, where the clothes are sold as Hugo Boss, North Face and other famous and expensive brand names.
