Welshmen in court after night at Sea World

Two tourists from Wales, Rhys Jones, 21 and Keri Mules, 20, appeared in an Australian court yesterday and had to pay a fine of 1,000 Australian dollars for stealing a penguin named Dirk.

The court heard that on 1 _____ night of April 14, the two men went to a beach party next to the Sea World theme park in Queensland. They stayed very late, and as they 2 _____ walking past the entrance to Sea World on their way home, they decided to break 3 _____ the park. While they were inside, they went swimming with dolphins and let off a fire extinguisher, causing a lot of damage. On their way out, they 4 _____ across Dirk, a seven-year-old penguin, which they 5 _____ and took home with them.

The following morning they could not 6 _____ much about the night before and were shocked to find the penguin in their apartment. They tried to look after the bird by feeding it and putting it in the shower, and then took it to a canal and let it go. A member of the public saw the bird and contacted the keepers from Sea World, who came and rescued the penguin. The police arrested the men and 7 _____ them with theft of a protected animal and with 8 _____.

In court, the judge said the two men were very stupid and were lucky to be alive. Jones and Mule wrote a letter of apology to Sea World and the Australian public and regretted what they had done.
