Let's
Celebrate In

India

One of our biggest celebrations here in India is called Diwali. It is also called "The Festival of Lights" because you will see strings of lights, bonfires, and clay lamps called diyas everywhere. It can also be very noisy! There are firecrackers and fireworks in the streets and parks.

We clean our homes, and open all the windows. We wear our best clothes, such as colorful saris. Some people make round designs on their floors using colored powder or sand.

These are called rangoli. In some areas of India, people make flower necklaces for their cows.

In other areas, they float thousands of glowing lamps down the river. In all parts of India people spend time with their families and exchange gifts.
