The Cornish Peninsula stretches out westwards far into the Atlantic. The climate here is the mildest in Britain. The population does a tremendous business in early flowers and vegetables, — and chiefly that keeps the place going.

The last westerly point of the peninsula is called Land's End. The cliffs are not especially high there, so at some points travellers can go down and wash their fingers in the Atlantic; but it's a wild enough spot, with the waves breaking and boiling against the rocks further out.

This text tells about a person who... .

- 1) likes reading magazines on the way home
- 2) likes watching TV and doesn't read
- 3) likes magazines and books
- 4) likes reading interesting books
- 5) reads a lot at work
- 6) likes e-books

- A. I like reading magazines. I read enough books for school. So if I read, I want to relax. Besides magazines make a long journey short so I would often take a magazine when I travel. When father takes me home from school, I can read it in the car in a traffic jam. Usually I prefer reading articles one or two pages long, or short stories.
- B. I love reading and I read mostly books as I think reading magazines is a waste of time so I don't read them. If I have one, I just look through the pictures and check the major topics. I think they are a bit too primitive. I enjoy reading books that deal with original ideas and have an exciting and entertaining plot.
- C. Well, I like both. What I prefer? It depends. If I have time and I'm not tired, I'd rather read a good book. I read books on holidays mostly. Magazines? They give us some information. There are a lot of pictures. A lot of ads — I don't like that. Though, there are interesting stories. Magazines smell like a painted wall — not pleasant.
- D. Now I read neither books nor magazines. I don't have time. I read a lot of technical literature that I need for my job. I've got a lot of work to do. Sometimes I am so tired that I can only watch TV when I come home. If I need some information, I use the Internet, but you can't always trust it.
- E. If you ask me what I prefer — books or magazines, I'd say neither. I prefer electronic books. They are comfortable, they are not heavy. They are on your pad. It has great advantages. First of all, your pad can contain a whole library of different books. Secondly, you can read anything you like, including all kinds of magazines. And the last but not least — you have access to the internet.
