Hal Tanner lives an ordinary life. He has got a nice flat and a good job at a natural history museum in San Diego, California.

At the weekend he does his chores around the house. Later he goes to his mother and father's house and helps them with their chores. Sometimes he plays basketball with his friends. Then he meets his cousin David for a cup of coffee in the afternoon.

During the week Hal gets up every morning and does the same thing. He makes his bed. He puts on his museum uniform. Then he _____(25) the newspaper at the kitchen table, and he eats toast and cereal with milk. After breakfast he washes up, brushes his teeth and rides his bike to work. He walks into the museum, and he doesn't have to look at the clock, because he knows that it is eight o'clock. He gets to work at the same time every day.

In the evening he _____(26) the museum, and he rides his bike to the supermarket. Usually he looks for something easy to cook. Then he goes back home. After dinner he reads, or he watches TV. Sometimes he works at his computer until he gets tired. Then he goes to bed and falls asleep. Hal knows that tomorrow will be just the same as today.

The Natural History Museum has got a lot of rooms with all kinds of exhibits. There are dinosaur bones and skeletons of _____(27) animals. There are _____(28) of planets, asteroids and stars. In one room a film shows trees changing in the autumn, winter, spring and summer. In the next room there is a film about earthquakes. There are exhibits about people from different countries, and how they work and play. Many of these exhibits look real, and visitors love looking at them.
