Be-Verbs

Be-verbs are verbs that describe people, places and things. Although they are verbs, be-verbs are different than regular verbs because be-verbs don't show any actions.

Pronoun	Present	Past
I	am I am Jane.	was I was in Italy last year.
you	are You are a student.	were You were thirsty.
he she it	is He is my friend. She is pretty. It is a box.	was He was angry. She was quiet. It was empty.
we they	are We are soccer players. They are in the library.	were We were in Brazil last summer. They were 12 years old last year.

We add not to make the negative form with a be-verb.

- I am not Jane.
- You are not a student.
- He is not my friend.
- She is not pretty.
- It is not a box.
- We are not soccer players.
- They are not in the library.
- I was not in Italy last year.
- You were not thirsty.
- He was not angry.
- She was not quiet.
- It was not empty.
- We were not in Brazil last summer.
- They were not 12 years old last year.

We can use contractions to make the negative forms shorter.

is not = isn't

are not = aren't was not = wasn't were not = weren't

Dear Alex,

How are you doing? Do you like your new home? How's your new school? It has been a month since you moved to your new city. Did you make many friends? We all miss you a lot. We talk about our best player (That's you!) when we play basketball after school. We had a tournament last week, and we came in second. If you were here, we could have won the whole thing.

Write to tell us how you are doing and what your new school is like. Let's keep in touch. Take care.

Your best friend,
Michael

Read the text. Then answer questions 6 to 8.

Having friends makes your life much more fun and exciting. How is it possible? Imagine you had a hard day. You either call or meet your friend and tell him or her about your day. Your friend will understand how difficult a day you must have had if he or she really cares about you. After a talk with your friend, you will feel much better. However, what if you come home alone and find nobody to talk with? How about if you want to play a computer game or see a movie with a friend but have no one to invite? You will become lonely and depressed. Scientific research has shown that your stress decreases and your happiness increases when you have someone to share things together with. Therefore, having friends will make your life much more enjoyable.

Read the story about Angela and Christine. Then answer questions 9 to 12.

Angela and Christine are best friends. They do things together every day. One day, Angela came to school with a new girl. "Who is that girl, Angela?" Christine asked. "This is my cousin Sonia. Her family moved to our town. She's going to study with us," Angela replied. "I see. Hi, I'm Christine. Welcome to our school," Christine said. "Do you want to get some ice cream after school?" Christine asked. "Sorry, but I have something to do with Sonia today," answered Angela. "Oh, OK," said Christine. "Then maybe next time." Christine acted as if she were OK, but she wasn't.

After school she felt upset about what had happened. "Angela has changed. We used to do things together, but since she has her cousin, she doesn't need me anymore," Christine thought.

"Happy birthday, Christine!" said Angela to Christine as she gave her a jewelry box the next day. "I couldn't pick out your birthday present with you, so I brought Sonia and we found this together. Do you like it?" Angela asked. "I thought you didn't want to be friends with me anymore," said Christine, feeling embarrassed. "What? That's not true. You are my best friend. I love hanging out with you. Now let's go get some ice cream," Angela said.
