Most of us admire [1] someone who faces challenges and achieves great things. That's why [2] _____ I know looks up to the scientist Stephen Hawking. He lived [3] _____ near London until he went to Oxford University. There, he quickly proved [4] _____ to be a maths genius. However, when he was only 21, doctors told him that he had [5] _____ called motor neurone disease (MND). [6] _____ usually lives long with MND, but Hawking didn't give up and, in fact, lived another 55 years. When he couldn't walk, he used a wheelchair. Soon he lost his voice, so then he used a computerised voice to speak and write his books. He travelled [7] _____, giving talks and showing the world what people can achieve when they believe in [8] _____.
