At university, she studied physics and did a lot of practical work. One of her favourite projects was an experiment about how plants grow without gravity. She found it challenging but exciting.

After graduating, she joined a space training centre. The training was difficult and sometimes dangerous. She had to do long runs and swim in cold water to stay fit. “It was very risky at times,” she said. “But I never felt unadventurous; I wanted to try everything!”

Katie hopes that one day, she will go on a spacewalk outside the International Space Station.
