Starting a business is rarely a smooth or predictable journey. Many entrepreneurs begin with a (1)_____ idea that immediately captures attention, but that alone does not guarantee success. Although stories of people becoming successful (2)_____ are popular, the reality is that most founders spend years refining their vision. Before they feel (3)_____ enough to commit fully, they often weigh the risks carefully, knowing that every decision is a (4)_____ on the future. While (5)_____ their goals, entrepreneurs must also work under constant pressure, especially when an important (6)_____ approaches. Contrary to popular belief, being (7)_____ is not always the original motivation; for many, the real reward lies in building something meaningful and sustainable.
