Lifelong learning is an essential part of personal and professional development. It is a continuous process that helps individuals stay relevant in their fields, keep up with changes in trends and adapt to uncleriness.

Curiosity is the spark that ignites the fire of learning. It is the desire to explore, question and discover new knowledge and experiences, which is required for lifelong learning. Albert Einstein is often credited with saying, "I have no special talents. I am only passionately curious."

Curiosity is the fuel that makes individuals seek out new information, skills and perspectives.

Curious people listen and approach interactions with the hope of learning something valuable. When someone is sincerely interested in something, they tend to listen more closely - determined to uncover the facts, seek out answers and pile up deep knowledge along the way.

With more information and details at their disposal, they tend to be more motivated, more focused and, ultimately, more productive. Research also shows "curiosity to be associated with higher levels of positive emotions, lower levels of anxiety, and more satisfaction with life." However, curiosity is only the driving force for the journey of lifelong learning.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the following questions from 34 to 40.

In recent years, the educational landscape has undergone significant changes. These changes have prompted the trend toward student-centred learning and the focus of lifelong learning skills. Lifelong learning transcends traditional education, encouraging students to continuously seek knowledge, skills, and experiences throughout their lives.

Lifelong learning is an on going pursuit of knowledge, skills, and personal development throughout an individual's life. It's not confined to formal education and is often identified as self-motivated learning. The 21st century has seen a global shift into a knowledge-based economy as opposed to the labour-based economy of the previous century. As a result, lifelong learning is absolutely essential if an individual wants to thrive in the adult work-force.

The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development explained in a 2019 report that "research suggests that, should current cutting-edge technology become widespread, 32% of current jobs are likely to see significant changes in how they are carried out and a further 14% of jobs could be completely automated." This means that if working adults don't learn and adapt to those changes, they will not be able to keep up with the evolving economy.

A vision for nurturing lifelong learners involves developing a classroom where every student leaves equipped with the tools, attitudes, and strength needed to thrive in an ever-changing world.

You can empower students to become lifelong learners, equipped with the skills and mindset needed for a dynamic and unknown future. By implementing strategies that promote curiosity, self-directed learning, and combining approaches, you can cultivate a culture of lifelong learning.
