Hello everyone!

Last summer, I took a trip to a small island with my family. The weather there was very changeable. In the morning, it was sunny and a little blustery, with strong winds near the sea. In the afternoon, dark clouds appeared, and soon there was a fierce storm with thundery weather. The rain was heavy, and waves were crashing loudly onto the beach.

The next day, the weather was better, so we went snorkeling. We saw many colorful fish, but our guide warned us about poison in some sea animals. He also talked about conservation and why we must protect the ocean. He said many animals have died because of pollution and climate change.

Although the weather was sometimes dangerous and turbulent, the trip was exciting and meaningful. I learned a lot about nature and really enjoyed my time there. I hope to visit that island again one day!
