

Reporter: So, you were swimming when the sunfish appeared. You _____ absolutely terrified when you saw something that big in the water.

Swimmer: _____. I was surprised, but I wasn't terrified.

Reporter: Really? I assume you thought it was a shark at first.

Swimmer: _____. It moved very slowly, so I knew it wasn't a shark.

Reporter: Interesting. _____ your heart started racing the moment you noticed it.

Swimmer: _____, yes. My heart beat faster, but more because I was excited than scared.

Reporter: _____ the most frightening moment of your life.

Swimmer: _____. In a way, it was one of the most peaceful moments I've ever experienced.

Reporter: Peaceful? _____ the other swimmers were screaming and trying to get out of the water.

Swimmer: _____. Some people were shocked, but no one was really panicking.

Reporter: _____ you tried to swim away immediately.

Swimmer: _____. I actually stayed still and watched it.

Reporter: _____ worried it would attack you.

Swimmer: _____. Sunfish are harmless.

Reporter: _____ you felt regret afterward for staying so close.

Swimmer: Absolutely not. _____, I felt lucky. It's not every day you see a creature like that.

Reporter: So _____ been a negative experience overall.

Swimmer: _____. To an extent, it was overwhelming, but mostly it was unforgettable and beautiful.

Reporter: _____ you'll never forget that day.

Swimmer: That's true. _____, it changed the way I see the ocean. Now I respect it even more.
