III. Read the text and decide if the statements are TRUE or FALSE.

The Earth is constantly changing because of natural forces. One of the most powerful events is a volcanic eruption. When a volcano begins to erupt, hot lava, gas and ash rise into the air. After an eruption, a large crater often remains at the top of the mountain.

Earthquakes usually happen along a fault line, where two tectonic plates meet. When these plates move suddenly, the ground shakes and buildings may fall. In some cases, earthquakes under the sea can cause a tsunami, sending huge waves toward the coast.

Weather can also be dangerous. A blizzard brings heavy snow and strong winds, while a tornado can destroy houses within minutes. In desert regions, a sandstorm may strike without warning, making it difficult to see or breathe.

Despite these dangers, people continue to study natural disasters. At dawn, scientists often collect data from affected areas. They create an infographic to explain how disasters form and how communities can prepare. Even in dismal conditions, rescue teams carry on their work with courage and grace. Their noble actions often bring a sense of hope, like a soft glow after a terrible blaze.
