

1. Many parents agree that the Internet can to be a useful source of information, but a lot
2. of them object to their teenage children spending itself too much time online. They've
3. been worrying lately that their children enjoy it the Internet so much that they will
4. neglect their homework. Parents are even more concerned that either children and teens
5. will be so deeply affected by the violent games they play online that they may to become
6. violent themselves. However, the Internet habits of approximately 800 teens was been
7. found by others scientists, with some positive findings. It has shown that sites like
8. Facebook, playing online games, and surfing the Internet may actually to play an
9. important role in a teenager's development. The study could picked that US teens who
10. were particularly interested in lots Japanese cartoons, for example, have recently been
11. studied up the Japanese language through each online discussion groups. In addition,
12. some teens became interested in making this videos.