Don't forget your finger

by nicole andrews

Forgotten (0) your lunch money? Well, for kids at one British school near (1) city of Leicester, this is no longer a problem. Instead (2) paying for their food with cash, pupils just put their finger into a machine which scans their fingerprints before (3) can get their food. A bill that says exactly what was ordered (4) then sent to parents, so pupils can't just eat chips every day! Some schools are even thinking about putting this new technology in every classroom. (5) you do not put your finger on the screen at the beginning of a lesson, the school office will know within two minutes and they will text or email your parents to ask where (6) are. Not everyone is giving the idea full marks. Some parents (7) afraid that their child's fingerprints could be stolen and refuse to let their children be fingerprinted. For John Barrett, however, head teacher of another Leicestershire school, the scanners are a genius invention. 'They save teachers (8) lot of time,' he says 'and will hopefully make missing school a thing of the past!'
