My Summer at Grandma's House

This summer, I went to stay at my grandmother's house in the countryside. She's a lovely person and has always been extremely nice (1)_____ me, so I was looking forward to the trip. However, from the very beginning, things didn't go as planned.

The journey there was difficult. There had been a severe storm a few days before my arrival. As a result, when I finally reached the house, I could see significant damage (2)_____ the roof of her old cottage. This unexpected situation also meant there was a high demand (3)_____ local construction workers, so we knew it would take time to get it fixed.

Living in a semi-broken house with workers always around was tiring. After a few weeks of constant dust and noise, I was completely fed up (4)_____ the situation. My only consolation was my grandma's old dog, Barnaby. I have always been very fond (5)_____ him, and he has always been very supportive. In fact, he is so dedicated that you can always rely (6)_____ him to cheer you up.

But even with a friendly dog, the house was not a comfortable place. Grandma, too, became quite worried. The biggest problem was her reaction (7)_____ the cold wind that would blow through the gaps. She was truly scared (8)_____ catching a serious cold, as the broken roof was the reason (9)_____ the draft in the entire house.

It wasn't until late August, after we had paid the contractor (10)_____ all the materials and labor, that the roof was finally repaired. As soon as it was done, there was a visible rise (11)_____ the indoor temperature and a major increase (12)_____ everyone's comfort. It was finally a peaceful home again.
