Pandawara: Young Heroes Cleaning Indonesia

Pandawara is a group of young people from Bandung, Indonesia. They became popular on social media because of their activities in cleaning dirty rivers and beaches. The group usually shares videos of their actions to inspire others to care about the environment. Many people support them because they show that young people can make positive changes.

Pandawara focuses on cleaning plastic waste from rivers, especially in West Java. One of their biggest actions was cleaning the Citarum River, which is known as one of the dirtiest rivers in Indonesia. Hamish Daud and His Love for the Ocean

Hamish Daud is an Australian-born actor, presenter, model, and environmentalist. Since he was young, he has been close to nature. He lived near the ocean, caught fish, and swam with manta rays and sharks. His love for the ocean came from his father, who was a surfer. He is also the husband of singer Raisa.

Growing up near the sea made him concerned about plastic pollution in the ocean. He founded the Indonesian Ocean Pride Foundation (IOP), which focuses on reducing plastic waste and protecting marine life. The foundation runs programs such as recycling plastic waste, educating people about microplastics, and promoting sustainable lifestyles. Hamish believes that humans depend on the ocean, so we must take care of it for a better future.
