

Phones in the Classroom

Today, many teenagers use smartphones every day. Phones help students communicate with friends, watch videos, and find information quickly. However, phones can also cause problems at school.

Some students check their phones during lessons. They read messages, watch short videos, or play games. When this happens, they stop listening to the teacher and miss important information.

Many teachers believe phones should not be used during class. They say students learn better when they focus on the lesson. Some schools even ask students to leave their phones in their bags during class time.

On the other hand, some people think phones can be useful learning tools. Students can use them to search for information, use dictionaries, or practice English with learning apps.

Because of this, many schools try to find a balance. Phones are allowed for learning activities, but not for games or social media during lessons.

Learning to use technology in a responsible way is an important skill for students today.

Part A – Choose the correct answer.

1. What device does the text mainly talk about?

- a. Computers
- b. Smartphones
- c. Television

2. What do some students do during lessons?

- a. Play games on their phones
- b. Read books
- c. Write homework

3. Why do teachers think phones are a problem?

- a. They are too expensive
- b. Students stop listening to the lesson
- c. Students forget them at home

4. According to the text, how can phones help students?

- a. By helping them sleep
- b. By helping them search for information
- c. By helping them finish school early

Part B – Complete the sentences according to the text.

- 1. Many teenagers use smartphones _____.
- 2. Some students check their phones during _____.
- 3. Some teachers ask students to leave their phones in their _____.
- 4. Phones can be used for learning with _____.

Part C – True or False

- 1. Smartphones can help students find information.
- 2. Some students play games on their phones during lessons.
- 3. All schools allow students to use phones freely in class.
- 4. Phones can sometimes be useful for learning.
- 5. Learning to use technology responsibly is important for students.