TEXT

Many products in modern shops are made in different countries. Clothes are often produced in Asia and then sold in Europe. In large shopping centres the shops are cleaned every morning and new products are delivered every day. Many people like shopping online because items are delivered directly to their homes. However, customers must keep their receipts if they want to return something. Sometimes products are returned because they don't fit or because they are damaged. In many cities charity shops are also popular. Second-hand clothes are sold there and the money is used to help people in need.
