Every day the tide comes in twice and goes out twice, or, as we sometimes say, it rises and falls. The cause of this rising and falling is the attraction of the sun and moon on the oceans of the world. The inland seas, being smaller masses of water, are not much influenced by this attraction, so that the Mediterranean Sea is almost tideless. But in many parts of the world, for example round the coasts of England, the water rises several feet between low tide and high tide.
