Dear Kevin,

I am writing to ask you for some information and advice on higher education in your country.

I am going to finish secondary school this summer and I have been thinking (11) ___ pursuing higher education in the UK. Here are the points that I want to consult you about.

First, what are the university entry requirements for international students in the UK? What I am worried most is my academic qualifications and transcript. As a school leaver, I will be awarded a certificate of secondary school (12)___ and given a transcript of marks for all subjects. Will that be enough? Do I have to take any university (13)___ examinations?

In addition, what types of accommodation are available for international students? Some institutions provide accommodation in halls of residence or university houses but how can I find out if I am eligible to apply for accommodation and (14)_____ I should send my application? What is the rent for each type of accommodation? Is it monthly or weekly paid?

I wish you and your family the best. I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Regards,

Mai

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

American parents usually encourage independence in their teenage children, and it is normal for teens to want more responsibility and freedom for their choices.

American teenagers often start high school with a basic plan of classes they need to take to get a high school diploma. Some subjects like English, maths, science, or social studies are required, others can be selected. Schools also provide extracurricular activities, such as sports, clubs, and bands. American teenagers who plan to go to college study hard to get good grades. They are highly motivated and very confident, and take responsibility for their learning.

Many American teenagers have part-time jobs as they want to gain work experience and learn how to manage their money. Many teens work at fast-food restaurants and stores, or do babysitting, and dog walking for neighbours. They also volunteer at local hospitals, food banks, and old people's homes, or take part in clean-up activities to improve their neighbourhood. This community service counts towards the volunteer hours that some schools require for university admission.

The teenage years form an important period of their development that influences adult life. The main goal of this period for most American teenagers is becoming independent, and they work hard both at school and outside school to achieve this goal.

Question 29. How do American teenagers prepare for college?

- A. By selecting only easy classes
- B. By watching online videos instead of going to school
- C. By avoiding extracurricular activities

D. By studying hard to get good grades
