Evelyn Smith

Evelyn Smith was a pilot. Her father, David, had an important company in Kansas, USA, where she was born. They later moved to Texas with her Californian mother, and there Evelyn grew up with her younger sister, Helen, who became a painter and also wrote for a newspaper there. Evelyn got interested in airplanes there when she was 20. Her uncle Jim, who was a mechanic, took her to a fair. They both got on an airplane and he flew it while she watched him. That's when she knew she wanted to learn to fly!

Evelyn later traveled to Toronto, Canada, where she helped sell medicines for sick people. In 1919, she returned to the USA and got into medical school in Philadelphia. Then, she moved to Sacramento, where she learned how to fly, along with her cousin, who sang and played popular music. During their training, Evelyn once saw a plane catch fire, but she wasn't frightened. In 1922, Evelyn bought an airplane thanks to some money that her father lent her. Two years later, she moved to Pasadena, where her best friend helped her find a job. During this time, she was able to keep flying as a hobby.

In May 1932, Evelyn flew from Hampton, USA, and after many hours she arrived in England, becoming the second woman to fly across the ocean.

Meet Katherine, A Part-Time Babysitter

Katherine, from Portland, got her degree from the University of San Francisco last June. She's taken care of children for the past four years, using babysitting to pay for her college, where she decided to take Child & Youth Studies as a degree. She has done everything from overnight jobs to traveling internationally with families. Here, she shares some aspects of her experience as a babysitter.

What's the most satisfactory aspect of your job?

I didn't think babysitting would be my passion as much as it has become. I started with a family when their daughter was 6 weeks old and now, she's turning two; she continues to surprise me every day. To be an observer of her development fills my soul in so many ways. The connection I have with the families just gets deeper, and I don't feel like an employee but like a member of the family, it's beyond words. I get to go on vacation with them or eat all my meals at their house. I get paid for something that I love doing.

What would you consider important to become a babysitter?

My philosophy is influenced by how I grew up, and as I was going through college, I decided to take some training in RIE parenting (Resources for Infant Educators) to learn more about taking care of children. Discipline is very important, but I never want to force my opinion on a child. RIE is absolutely about respecting the child, and I'm a huge fan of that.

When you aren't babysitting, what do you do?

I brought my own bike from home, so I go biking here every day. I just love it.

36. What's Katherine mainly doing in this interview?
- encouraging people to hire her as their next babysitter
 - suggesting that more people should get a degree in babysitting
 - sharing the necessary steps to become a babysitter in San Francisco
 - describing how the babysitting experience has been extraordinary for her
37. In paragraph 2, the underlined phrase "it's beyond words" means
- She doesn't have the right words to describe her deep connection with families.
 - She uses incorrect vocabulary while chatting with children during their trips.
 - She can't really define what being a member of her family means.
 - She needs more vocabulary to change and improve children's behavior.
38. What can the reader find out about Katherine's idea of babysitting?
- She considers it is necessary to grow up with a babysitter.
 - She recognizes that respect is key when dealing with children.
 - She expects children to always have the same opinion as hers.
 - She looks forward to being the child's babysitter for many years.
39. Katherine's work experience has been mainly
- negative because she always has to move around with families.
 - positive because she will finally have a family and work day-hours only.
 - negative because she's often surprised and ignores what comes next
 - positive because she's able to notice how children develop through the years.
40. If Katherine wanted to apply to a new babysitting job, which ad would she post?
- Charming babysitter available this summer
Honest girl looking for a job to enter college.
Call me.
 - New babysitter available this summer. Friendly neighbor willing to gain new experience.
Call me.
 - Professional babysitter available this summer
Loving and qualified woman with studies in child care. Call me.
 - Efficient babysitter available this summer. Responsible teenager looking forward to finding a family to live with.
Call me.
