

Hey Katie,

I (1) _____ about what you said in your email for quite some time and so I'm writing back to (2) _____ you on your problem.

Firstly, I'm sure your brother didn't mean to break your mobile phone. He probably did it (3) _____ accident. I know you don't get (4) _____ with him, but he's your brother so don't be so hard on him. It's important to have a good (5) _____ with your family members. In (6) _____, I really think that you (7) _____ talk to him, before doing anything else. He (8) _____ understand how you feel, but I believe he should know. I understand that you'd (9) _____ not talk to him at the moment as you're very angry, but he should take responsibility for his actions. Explain and make him (10) _____ that you expect him to do something this time, for example buy you a new mobile. He (11) _____ be able to afford it. You've told me that he puts some of his pocket money (12) _____ every week. He can't (13) _____ away with everything, right? One last thing: you (14) _____ to be calm when talking to him. It's the only way he'll take you seriously.

Well, I hope I've been of some help to you.

Take care,

Jacqueline
