Indigenous New Year

The Mapuche New Year is one of the most important dates in the indigenous calendar in Chile. "We Tripantu" means the "return of the sun" and is celebrated on June 23rd, the winter solstice and shortest day of the year in the Southern Hemisphere. The Mapuche people wait for the rising of the new sun, which they believe brings a renewal of life and rebirth at the start of a New Year. They perform rituals and invoke the spirits of their ancestors with ancient dance and song.

Tapati

Tapati is a celebration of ancient culture and tradition on Easter Island (Rapa Nui), held in February. The local people paint their bodies with mythical symbols and images and gather to recount the legends of their ancestors. There are also many competitions such as swimming and canoeing which test physical skill, the most daring of which is Haka Pei, where contestants toboggan down the steep mountain on banana tree trunks.

Grape Harvest Festival

Chilean wine is world-famous, and so the Grape Harvest Festival, or "Vendimias," is an important tradition. The festivals take place during the final week of March through May when the grapes are ripe after summer. Rural towns across central Chile celebrate the festival with a religious ceremony to bless the first batch of grapes. A Grape Queen is then chosen, who is weighed against a bottle of wine, and teams of locals engage in a grape-stomping competition to see who can pulp the most juice out of 20 kg of fruit in 10 minutes, and a fair amount of wine is also consumed to celebrate Chile's bountiful production.

La Tirana

La Tirana is a widely celebrated festival, attracting many tourists and pilgrims from across the country. It takes place in the northern town of La Tirana in Tarapacá Region on June 16. The festival is a mix of the Catholic and indigenous religions in paying tribute to the Virgen del Carmen through carnivals and dancing. The dancers wear elaborate costumes and masks, with the lead dancer dressed in the fiercest costume to lead the diablada, the “dance of the devils.” Locals sell crafts and food in the streets and many masses are held in the surrounding churches during the festival.

Fiestas Patrias

Without a doubt Chile’s most important festival, Fiestas Patrias is the National Holiday of Chile, celebrated on Sep. 18 and 19. It is a commemoration of the First Government Assembly which marked Chilean Independence on Sep. 18, 1810. The festivities include dancing the Cueca, the national dance of Chile, which is done in pairs with handkerchiefs. People adorn their houses with the national flag and everyone takes to the streets and parks to share in games, food, and drink, including the famous “Terremoto,” usually a mix of pipeño wine, pineapple ice cream, and grenadine.
