SECTION 5: Reading. Read the advice website. Then read the statements. Choose True, False, or No information.

When you need an answer, ask Aunt Anne!

Dear Aunt Anne, I need your help! I'm in a school concert tomorrow night, and I'm really excited. Unfortunately, I have a sore throat and a cough. It's not too bad, and I feel OK, but I'm the singer. Aunt Anne, I need advice. I want to sing at the concert, but I can't, right? –

Mike Prints

Well, Mike, you know the real question. It isn't "Can I sing?" It's "Should I sing?" We know what the answer is, right? You shouldn't sing if you feel sick. Have some hot tea and chicken soup. You need lots of rest. I'm sure you can sing at the next concert. Maybe you feel a little sad now, but you'll be OK in a few days. Feel better, Mike! –Aunt Anne

I need your advice, Aunt Anne, please! I'm going out with a friend tomorrow. His name's Larry, and he's a very good swimmer. He wants to go to the beach, but there is a serious problem. I can't swim! Larry is so excited, but I'm really scared of the water. What should I do, Aunt Anne? I need help, fast! –Josie Notts

Well, Josie, you can learn to swim this evening! Ha ha, I'm not serious, Josie. Why don't you tell him you can't swim? If he's a good swimmer, he can teach you. Sounds great to me! Or you can lie to him. You can say you have a cold or a fever, and you can't go swimming. Then you can learn to swim really fast! When you feel ready, you can go to the beach another time. But, Josie, it's always better to tell the truth. Don't lie to your friends! –Aunt Anne
