The past few decades have been dominated by the waves of feminist movement, resulting in a major shift in public perception of women's roles. In many places, women are no longer regarded as inferior to men and responsible for taking care of their families. In the present-day society, women have taken on such new roles as political leaders, university lecturers, scientists, medical experts and so on. These emerging responsibilities require modern women to have specific qualities to raise them into the positions of power.

It is vital that females have a sense of purpose. In other words, they need to have the ability to explore what they want to do and get to know their priorities. For instance, as an enthusiastic feminist activist, Tarana Burke launched the MeToo with the express purpose of helping the victims of molestation to speak up for themselves and interrupting sexual assault wherever it happens. Moreover, having great resolve is another attribute of a self-made woman. Take Kelly Clarkson for example. Although she was born into a divorced family, her grit and determination made her rise to fame after winning the coveted title of American Idol. Last but not least, women must have a good education because it is the key to a better life in the future. According to a recent study conducted by World Bank, if developing nations want to eradicate poverty, hunger, injustice and inequality, the governments must lend their weight to girls' education. However, women's education in these countries has yet to receive due care and attention from policymakers.

By and large, better educated women with clear purpose and great determination will be able to fulfill task from both the domestic and public domain of the world of work.
