

I used to work

I used to work in an office in a big company. But I (no longer /used to / still) be scared of computers! It just seemed (so / to/ too) technical and complicated that the thought of using them made me (felt / feel / feeling) weak. I once had a senior job with a cosmetics firm. When they switched from typewriters to computer, I convinced them I did not need one and could not use it. I was terrified of them and I'd even take the day off sick (unless / if / however) there is a training course. Finally I decided to give up my job but I couldn't get another one because I was not skilled at (used / use / using) computers. So I went to a UK Online Centre in London, where I was shown how to basic word processing, Thanks to these courses I've now got a good job. I can use a PC (happier / happily / happy) and I have started using the internet.

QUESTIONS

1) Where did the person use to work?

2) How did the person initially feel about computers?

3) How did the person react when the cosmetics firm switched from typewriters to computers?

4) Why did the person decide to give up their job?

5) Where did the person went to learn about computers?

6) How has the person's attitude towards computers changed after taking the course?
