Coral reefs are among the most beautiful natural wonders in the world. They are home to thousands of colorful fish and sea creatures. These underwater structures take thousands of years to form and provide food and protection for marine life. However, coral reefs around the globe are dying at a worrying speed.

The main cause of coral reef destruction is rising ocean temperatures. When water becomes too warm, corals lose their bright colors and turn white. This process, called coral bleaching, makes them sick and weak. Pollution from factories and farms also damages reefs. Plastic waste, chemicals, and dirty water kill the tiny organisms that corals need to survive. Overfishing removes important species that help keep reefs healthy and balanced.

The loss of coral reefs would be catastrophic for both nature and humans. These ecosystems support about 25% of all ocean species, even though they cover less than 1% of the sea floor. Millions of people depend on reefs for food and income from fishing and tourism. Reefs also protect coastlines from storms and big waves. Without them, many coastal communities would face serious dangers.

Scientists are working hard to save coral reefs, but time is running out. Some try to grow new corals in laboratories and plant them in damaged areas. Others focus on reducing pollution and creating protected ocean zones where fishing is not allowed. These efforts can help, but they will only succeed if we act quickly. We must lessen the effects of climate change and reduce our impact on oceans, or these magnificent natural wonders may disappear forever.

[Adapted from National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration Coral Reef Conservation Report]

Question 31: Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

- A. Coral reefs occupy the majority of the ocean floor across the globe.
- B. Ocean warming is the only factor leading to the death of coral reefs.
- C. Corals can lose their natural colors when facing extreme water heat.
- D. Laboratory-grown corals have already fixed all damaged underwater areas.

Question 32: According to the final paragraph, what is suggested about saving the reefs?

- A. Scientists are the only people who can take actions to protect the oceans.
- B. Addressing global climate issues is vital for the survival of coral reefs.
- C. Creating more fishing zones is the most effective way to help corals grow.
- D. We should wait for more research before starting any conservation efforts.

Question 33: Which solution is most likely to help reefs recover over time, according to the passage?

- A. Fishing more in open seas to reduce pressure near reefs.
- B. Growing new corals and protecting areas while reducing pollution.
- C. Building taller buildings near coasts to block strong sea winds.
- D. Moving reefs to deeper water so they never turn white again.

Question 34: What is the best main idea of the passage?

- A. The historical process of how colorful underwater structures were formed over thousands of years.
- B. The economic importance of marine ecosystems to the survival of coastal communities and tourism.
- C. The severe threats facing coral reefs and the urgent need for collective conservation efforts.
- D. The biological study of how tiny organisms in the ocean react to different types of plastic waste.

In the last two years, AI tools have become part of daily life. Many students use chatbots to check grammar, get ideas, or summarize long texts. Some people even use AI to plan trips or write emails faster. (37) _____. However, it also raises an important question: are we learning better, or just finishing tasks quicker?

Supporters say AI is like a smart assistant. (38) _____. For people with limited English, this support is useful and can increase confidence. (39) _____ If users copy answers without thinking, they may lose critical skills, such as problem-solving and clear writing. There is also the issue of trust: AI can sound confident while giving wrong information.

In my view, AI should be used with rules. Schools can allow it for brainstorming and language support, but require students to show their own work and sources. (40) _____ Used wisely, AI can improve learning; used carelessly, it can weaken it.

A. But critics worry about overuse.

B. It can explain concepts in simple words, suggest examples, and help learners practice

C. This trend saves time and can reduce stress, especially when deadlines are close

D. At the same time, we should teach how to verify information, not only how to generate it.
