Helping the Earth Projects

Recycling Challenge: Start a classroom recycling challenge! Gather paper, plastic, and aluminum cans for a month. Create posters explaining which items can be recycled and why it helps the Earth. Assign teams to check bins and track progress. At the end of the challenge, discuss how recycling reduces pollution and saves resources. You can also make creative crafts using recycled materials. Finally, present what you've learned to other students and encourage them to recycle too!

Plant a Garden: Create a small garden at school or home! Plant flowers, vegetables, or trees to help clean the air and provide food for people and animals. Research which plants grow best in your area and how they help the environment. Keep a journal to track plant growth, watering, and weather. Learn about composting to reduce food waste and help plants grow. Share your gardening experience with classmates and explain why plants are important for a healthy planet.

Clean-Up Day: Organize a community clean-up! Choose a park, beach, or schoolyard to clean. Work in teams to collect litter and separate recyclables from trash into two different groups. Keep a record of how much waste is collected. Discuss how litter harms animals and nature. After the cleanup, make signs to remind people not to litter.

An interview with 23-year-old Ellie Beaumont, who visited every country in the world!

by Jake Miller, aged 9

How long does it take to visit all the countries in the world?
I know people who've completed this journey in three years. It took me five years to save enough money to do a four-year journey around the world.

What did you do before visiting a new country?
I booked flights, but I didn't plan every moment of the trip. I loved discovering new places and learning the language while I was there. But I always took a good book with me, so I had something to do.

What did you do when you first arrived?
In every country, I went on foot to explore a new city – often for several hours! I did that before anything else. Then I usually found somewhere nice to eat. It's a brilliant way to meet and talk to the people there.

Which place did you most enjoy visiting?
Well, I had a great time at Bondi Beach in Australia. Spending time in the Amazon Rainforest was amazing! That was the best experience, but travelling across the Sahara Desert was really cool too.

What will you do next?
During the trip, I wrote a blog and even made a short film about my journey. And I think it was good because a museum wants my advice on what to include in a travel exhibition they're putting on. I'm really pleased!
