The thing I like most about living on a farm when I was small was the change of seasons: spring, summer, autumn and winter. I could see them all come and go and each one was completely different. If I hadn't been born and raised in the country, I would have never been able to tell the difference. Now in the city, you can buy summer flowers in winter and eat the same vegetables all the year round. Whereas, in the country, I could only eat things at certain times of the year. For example, strawberries in June and turnips in winter. I lived my childhood with the seasons.

Also we made most of our food and would never eat frozen or tinned food. Everything was fresh, so it must be better than the type of food I am taking now in the city. City people think that people in the country miss a lot of good things about modern life, but in my opinion they miss a lot more than them. They miss real life.

Long ago in Vietnam, there was a poor but kind farmer named Khoai. He worked for a rich and greedy landowner. Khoai worked very hard every day, and the landowner promised, “If you work well, I will let you marry my daughter.”

Khoai believed him and worked day and night. After three years, he came to ask for the marriage. But the landowner laughed and said, “If you want to marry my daughter, bring me a bamboo tree with one hundred knots!”

Khoai was sad. He went into the forest, looking for such a bamboo, but no tree had one hundred knots. Tired and hopeless, he sat down and cried.

Suddenly, a fairy appeared. The fairy gave him a magical spell: “Khắc nhập, khắc nhập” and “Khắc xuất, khắc xuất”. He told Khoai to cut 100 bamboo pieces and say the magic words.

Khoai did as told. When he said “Khắc nhập, khắc nhập,” all the pieces stuck together and became one long bamboo with 100 knots!

He brought it to the landowner. Surprised and scared, the landowner agreed to let Khoai marry his daughter. But Khoai wanted to teach him a lesson. He said “Khắc nhập!” and stuck the landowner to the bamboo! Everyone laughed.

Later, Khoai said “Khắc xuất!” to free him. The landowner kept his word, and Khoai married the girl. They lived happily ever after.
