For seventeen-year-old Soumaya Hart, it was a special moment on a boat that did it. She was with a group of friends on the trip of a lifetime off the coast of Sicily. 'It was the most beautiful place I'd ever seen. Not even more could compare with this. I looked at my friends. Except for one person, they were all checking their phones. They'd posted photos on social media and were counting their "likes". They weren't even looking at the view.'

At that moment, Soumaya decided to stop using social media. 'Apart from calling my family, I don't use my phone. I've seen what it does to people my age. We don't appreciate the things that are important. Half the time we don't even see them.'

Everyone in Soumaya's family, except her grandmother, was on social media. What did they think of her decision? 'At first, they thought it was strange. Even my dad, who's hopeless with technology, is on social media. But after a while, they saw I was spending my time doing really interesting things like volunteer work and sports. Apart from my younger brother, who still thinks I'm strange, the family realises it works for me.'
